West End and Broadway Legends unite for Gravity at the Colonial Theater

Three of musical theater's most celebrated leading ladies will come together on the stage of Idaho Falls' historic Colonial Theater for Gravity, an unforgettable evening of powerhouse vocals, storytelling, friendship, and the magic of Broadway and the West End.

Kerry Ellis, Louise Dearman, and Rachel Tucker each have an extraordinary connection to one of musical theater's most iconic productions, Wicked. Ellis became the first British actress to play Elphaba in Wicked, Dearman made history as the first—and remains the only—performer to play both Elphaba and Glinda, and Tucker has portrayed Elphaba on both the West End and Broadway. Together, their shared connection to the iconic role gives Gravity its fitting name.

Audiences can expect an evening filled with extraordinary vocals, familiar favorites, captivating stories, humor, and the unmistakable energy of live theater. Gravity brings together the songs and roles that have shaped these performers' careers while offering audiences a unique opportunity to experience three internationally acclaimed musical theater stars sharing one stage.

"I can't think of a better way to kick off our Main Stage season at the Colonial Theater," said Idaho Falls Arts Council Executive Director Gray Augustus. "We have so much incredible theatrical talent in our area, and the appreciation and love for Broadway music and performance is stronger than ever in East Idaho. Gravity brings three of the biggest female talents in musical theater together on one stage, in the intimate
